

Climate Chat started in 2023 and aims to chat with communities of interest, focussing on equalities groups, in engagement activities around climate action.

It's important that everyone in the community can feel like they can do their own wee bit to help fight the climate crisis.

For the past 4 years we have worked alongside small groups living in Moray and Borders on climate action activity. We have been building on this and taking our learning/approaches to other groups across Scotland who have been traditionally marginalised from mainstream climate activity.

The project has helped people to:

- Improve climate literacy, in terms of understanding what climate change means for them and their community and what actions Scotland is taking.
- Increase confidence and positive feelings about talking to others about climate change and action, and having a voice at a local and national level.
- Increase practical understanding and engagement in actions they can take in their daily life and in their local communities on climate change and where to find information and advice.
